To that end ASERL's purposes are to:

- provide and maintain inter-institutional resource sharing and services for mutual benefit;
- reduce duplication of research materials where feasible by bringing together strong, cohesive, and well developed collections of materials in all formats;
- promote research on library subjects through the design and implementation of model programs that can be applied and adapted to the needs and circumstances of individual members as well as to the entire group;
- sponsor educational opportunities for librarians, paraprofessionals, library directors, and others who provide support to library operations;
- disseminate professional information among libraries, exchange ideas, and develop new concepts and programs;
