Florida State University
Aftermath of the Shooting
Key Points

• Develop and maintain an active, healthy relationship with campus security/police.

• Mandate periodic (twice a year?) active shooter training for staff and student workers.

• Take advantage of other types of training for safety and security.

• Train staff to be alert and report suspicious behavior. - “See something, say something”

• Find out if your campus has a “clearinghouse” for reporting troubling behavior, and if so, use it.

• Utilize security cameras and other methods to watch what’s going on in your buildings – and make the cameras visible.

• Consider requiring guests to sign-in – a proven way to discourage bad behavior.

• If your library experiences a traumatic event, bring in counseling and support services immediately; schedule follow-ups for as long as needed.